

The creative production of art and artistic expression are, today, among the most promising ways to expand the market economy in rural and urban Native communities

